

Case Study

Asset Management System

The Department of Defence maintains a large and diverse property portfolio. Connexion created a customised solution, known as DEMS that better represented Defence's business and contract processes. DEMS has continued to evolve with the changing face of Defence over the past ten years to provide a management information framework that produces meaningful data to support management decisions and to enable end users to manage the entire life cycle of all properties, facilities and infrastructure occupied by the Australian Defence Force. This system forms the basis for the Connexion web based asset management system that can be configured to meet any organisations needs.

The Solution

Client	Defence Support Group (DSG)
Issue	Implement a management information framework that produces meaningful data to support management decisions and to enable end users to manage the entire life cycle of all properties, facilities and infrastructure occupied by the Australian Defence Force.
Source	Meeting the legislative and contractual requirements associated with Defence's vast property portfolio.
Implications	Failure to maintain the property portfolio in a responsible manner increases the maintenance liability and exposes occupants to unsafe conditions.
Solution	Development of a comprehensive business solution for all aspects of Total Estate Management at both the macro and micro levels.
Result	Defence has been able to manage all elements of its $16.04b estate in a responsible and business-like manner for the last 10 years. The system provides credible, timely and accurate advice to the department on estate issues and ensures transparency of information at all levels. The system promotes quality advice and effective decision making through a sound understanding of the real cost of owning and maintaining the assets.

The solution provides a management information system for the management of any type of asset.
